Undergraduate Bachelor of Theology

About the course

The BTh builds on the introductory knowledge and skills acquired in the Certificate. For students admitted direct to the BTh, the syllabus for the first year (if studied full-time) or first two years (if studied part-time) is the same as for the Certificate. You will develop a broad knowledge and understanding of the beliefs, practices, texts and history of the Christian tradition, and, where appropriate, other world religions, together with knowledge and understanding of advanced theological, biblical, and religious concepts and language. You will also have the chance to focus on an area or areas of theology of particular interest to you, including writing a sustained piece of theological reflection or a dissertation. You will have developed significant connections between faith and modern intellectual developments within their cultural contexts, and, if you wish, reflected on your own professional practice.

In addition to the six introductory papers taken for the Certificate, BTh students take a further twelve papers including at least one biblical paper, one history/doctrine paper and one practical theology/religious studies paper. You may also undertake a piece of individual research culminating in a dissertation, project or a sustained piece of theological reflection.

How you will study

The course is taught by two of the permanent private halls of the University of Oxford, (Wycliffe Hall and Regent's Park College), in conjunction with the Department for Continuing Education. The Halls are committed to shared delivery of the course, with all options available to all students, regardless of their collegiate affiliation, and of the affiliation of teaching staff. Individual halls may offer additional teaching to their students, typically in small group tutorials.

Most teaching events are usually held in-person, but may be moved online, rescheduled or revised if necessary e.g. as a result of the Coronavirus pandemic.

Teaching: there are normally 20 contact hours for each of the papers you take (for languages it may be more). Some of the teaching will be shared across all the students, and some will be delivered by the individual hall.

Private study: in addition to the contact hours, you can expect to commit around 200 hours of private study for each paper. This may include background reading, preparation for seminars and classes and work on assignments.

Assessment: The method of assessment varies between the papers: some are assessed by essay, project or portfolio of work, others by written examinations. A few offer a choice of method of assessment. There will be an opportunity to submit assignments three times during the year, and one option to sit the written exams each year (which will usually take place in Trinity Term – the Oxford summer term).

Attendance: Students are expected to attend a minimum of 80% of classes and other sessions as specified in the course handbook.

Changes to courses

The University will seek to deliver this course in accordance with the description set out in this course page. However, there may be situations in which it is desirable or necessary for the University to make changes in course provision, either before or after registration. The safety of students, staff and visitors is paramount and major changes to delivery or services may have to be made in circumstances of a pandemic (including Covid-19), epidemic or local health emergency. In addition, in certain circumstances, for example due to visa difficulties or because the health needs of students cannot be met, it may be necessary to make adjustments to course requirements for international study.

You can find full information under “Changes to Courses” (sections 37 to 49) in the Terms and Conditions for this course (<https://www.conted.ox.ac.uk/mnt/attachments/cont-ed-matriculated-terms-and-conditions-for-2022-3.pdf>).

On 11 May 2021 the UK Council for International Student Affairs published new regulations and guidance to be used in assessing the fee status of students commencing courses in August 2021 and later. We will be using this guidance to carry out fee status assessments for students commencing courses in 2022/23, including students from the EU, EEA and Switzerland.

Additional Costs

Living Costs 2022~23

Full-time students: Your living costs will vary significantly dependent on your lifestyle. These are estimated to be between £1,215 and £1,755 per month in 2022-23. Each year of an undergraduate course usually consists of three terms of eight weeks each but you may need to be in Oxford for longer. As a guide you may wish to budget over a nine-month period to ensure you also have sufficient funds during the holidays to meet essential costs.

Students pay for accommodation and food, although this is often heavily subsidised. Permanent Private Halls (PPH) provide a variety of accommodation and meal options. Costs vary between halls, and are likely to increase annually.

Part-time students: The living costs above are based on single, full-time students living in Oxford. While it may be the case that, as a part-time student, you will not be based in Oxford during your studies, you will still need to cover your cost of living on a full-time basis. If this applies to you, you should calculate your living costs to be sure that you have sufficient funding to meet these costs for the duration of your course. In particular, part-time students who are not based in Oxford will need to calculate travel and accommodation costs carefully. Please note that living costs outside Oxford may be different from those shown above.

Full information, including for students with dependents, is available at:

Other costs

You will need to allow for costs related to your studies, such as textbooks, stationery, printing and photocopying, course-related equipment and materials.

If you require a visa to study at Oxford, please see the Student Visa page for information about health costs.

Living costs for future years

When planning your finances for any future years of study in Oxford beyond 2022~23, you should allow for an estimated increase in living expenses of 3% each year.
