About the course

This is a one-year part-time course at third-year undergraduate level which aims to provide you with an advanced grounding in British Archaeology and increase your understanding of the skills and techniques needed to recover, process and evaluate archaeological evidence.

There are three possible modules, with one module being offered each year.

The modules are

- Module 3: Anglo-Saxon, Viking and Medieval Britain

The module on offer for 2016~17 is Module 1: Early Prehistoric Britain.

There are evening teaching sessions during term time, plus tutorials, weekend field visits and the choice of either two practical weekends or a one-week practical fieldwork programme. You will be given reading lists for the teaching sessions and coursework.

Module 1: Early Prehistoric Britain

The first humans arrived in Britain more than 800,000 years ago when the climate and geography of the British Isles were very different from what they are today. This course will examine the early prehistory of Britain from the time of these earliest inhabitants until c. 1000 BC. The dramatic environmental changes and the behaviour of early hominin populations will be considered within a European context and the cultural developments of the British Palaeolithic will be examined. Hunter-gatherers of the Mesolithic, the society and settlement of the first farmers, trade and exchange, and the emergence of new technologies including the use of metals will be explored.

Students are required to complete:

- 3 assignments of up to 2,500 words;
- A practical logbook of up to 4,000 words, to include a choice of learning tasks based on the practical training, visits to archaeological sites and/or museums and comparative site/artefact accounts, and a reflective discussion.
- A 10,000 word dissertation on a topic agreed with the Course Director.

Students who achieve an overall pass rate of 70%+ and pass each element of assessed work at the first attempt will be considered by the examiners for the award of a distinction.

The course requires attendance at:

- A minimum of 80% of the teaching sessions;
- Four tutorials;
- Either two practical weekends or one week (or equivalent) practical fieldwork.
