

Course Information Sheet for entry in 2017-18

MSc in Teaching English Language in University Settings

About the course

The MSc TELUS is a degree in applied linguistics and TESOL (Teaching English to Speakers of Other Languages) taught primarily via distance/online learning. This innovative two-year part-time course offers a cutting-edge introduction to the linguistic and pedagogic knowledge and skills needed for teaching English language in higher education.

A low-residency course, it is characterised by intense online interaction and feedback, using a range of communication media. Its small-group teaching format pursues the Oxford tradition of demanding much of students and giving them much in return.

The course is taught over two academic years, preceded each year by a week's residential module in Oxford. Numbers on the course are kept low, to ensure quality of teaching and learning.

There are four distance-taught modules per year, spread over two eight-week terms from October to April. The assessment for each module comprises a take-home examination. In the third term of the first year you may pursue guided individual study on a chosen topic to begin developing a dissertation project.

Students are admitted in the first instance as students on the Postgraduate Diploma (PGDip) in Teaching English Language in University Settings. If you complete the PGDip to a high level you may then progress to the MSc, subject to a satisfactory dissertation research proposal. You will then matriculate at Linacre College in Trinity term of your second year and complete your dissertation during that term, under the supervision of a member of the applied linguistics group.

Changes to courses

The University will seek to deliver each course in accordance with the descriptions set out above. However, there may be situations in which it is desirable or necessary for the University to make changes in course provision, either before or after registration. For further information, please see the University's Terms and Conditions.
